Regents propose amendment to Kearney State study

By JOHN WATSON
Staff Reporter

Board of Regents' Chairwoman Nancy Hoch and NU President Ronald Roskens called a special press conference Saturday to offer an amendment to Legislative Bill 247, which they said would allow the university to support adding Kearney State College to the NU system.

At its April 8 meeting, the board voted 6-2 not to support LB 247, a bill which would fund a study of the state's higher education system and add Kearney State to the NU system.

At that meeting, the majority of the regents said they could not support the bill because it added Kearney State without first studying the effects it could have on the NU system.

Hoch, who earlier said university lobbyists would be instructed to lobby against the bill, said regents would support it if senators accepted NU's amendment.

The amendment asks the Legislature to "consider" stopping the Kearney State-NU merger if the study funded by the bill concludes the union is not in the state's best interest.

Roskens said the amendment will "ensure that if the study concludes that the transfer of Kearney State College is inconsistent with an overall plan for the best interests of higher education in Nebraska, then the Legislature will re-evaluate its decision before any transfer is effected."

Sen. Roger Wehrbein of Plattsmouth has agreed to introduce the amendment on behalf of the board.

Roskens said the university was not changing its stand on admitting Kearney State to the NU system by offering the amendment.

"It was a mistake not to notify the student regents."

— Paula Effle

"We have not opposed the transfer of Kearney State College to the university, nor have we advocated it. Rather, we have maintained that a decision on the transfer of Kearney State College should be made only after the issue has been thoroughly investigated and all factors have been considered," Roskens said.

Contacted Sunday, UNO Student President/Regent Paula Effle said she was unaware of the press conference.

"It was a mistake not to notify the student regents," Effle said.

Student regents from the three NU campuses sit on the board, but not as voting members.

David Thomas will present "From No Mind to Never Mind: Steps Toward Human Completion" Friday in the Planetarium.

Speaker will address the five levels of being

By DOROTHY O'LEARY
Staff Reporter

Different levels of the imagination will be the subject of three presentations given by David Thomas this Friday in the UNO Planetarium.

Thomas addresses his "Five Levels of Being in America," in his lecture titled "From No Mind to Never Mind: Steps Toward Human Completion."

Thomas developed his "Five Levels" in 1984.

"It represents a culmination of years of reading and thinking about the set of possibilities that are in front of us when we enter this world," he said.

On a continuum from left to right, Thomas' five levels are as follows: No Mind, Hive Mind, Heroic Mind, Poetic Mind and Never Mind.

Describing what the American norm might look like in each stage, Thomas said, "Fifteen percent of the time, I might go around with absolutely no mind at all.

"Seventy percent of the time, I live out the dictates of the program. Ten percent of the time I tire of that and decide to behave on purpose. Then I remember, all too rarely, that it is how I do what I do that really matters."

According to Thomas, the fifth level, "Never Mind," is rarely reached. It is at this level, he said, we feel the unlimited capacity to achieve and create.

He said the easiest way to think of the "Never Mind" is to try to "never mind" all that would otherwise distract us from our "duty to the moment."

"It is the pursuit of these stages that is the inherent desire of everyone," he said. "It's about realizing personal freedom. It may be right up there with love as the thing human beings most love to experience."

Thomas said his presentation will give UNO students an idea of what his work is about and what is involved in his workshops.

"When I do my presentations, I try to speak to as many of the issues as I can that I think are involved in going from No Mind to Never Mind," he said.

Thomas said this includes learning how to free yourself from debilitating anxiety by learning to profoundly relax and to deal with the emotions of worry, fear, guilt and anger.

He said he designed his presentation to broaden our vision so we can sense what is possible.

"The various levels of the imagination can be exemplified by art, bringing something out of nothing and putting your vision into reality," he said.

According to Thomas, fear is usually the reason we do not do what we must in order to realize our potential.

"It's about realizing personal freedom. It may be right up there with love as the thing human beings most love to experience."

—Thomas

"To go all the way means we must deal with things we are afraid of," he said.

Thomas said he is offering another way of looking at life.

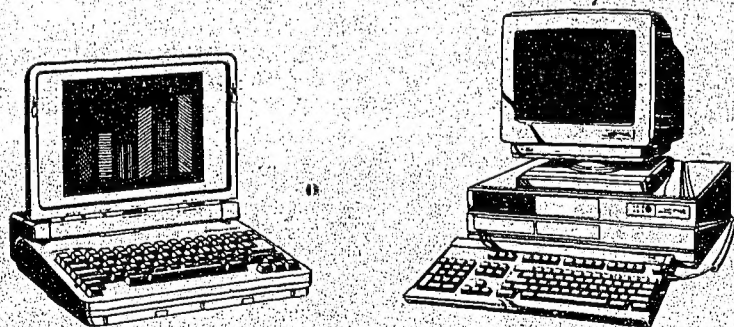

"The more ways you have of looking at it, the freer and more equipped you are to cast it in a light that will allow you to practice the high art of taking whatever comes your way and turning it to your advantage," he said.

The Society of Physics Students (SPS) is sponsoring Thomas' appearances. The activity represents a revitalization of the group, according to UNO student and SPS member Michael Kruse.

The presentations will be held in the planetarium of the Durham Science Center April 21 at 2:30 p.m., 4 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $4 for the public and $2 for students and can be reserved by calling 554-3722.

The Fourth Annual Diet Pepsi Women's Walk and Briefcase Relay soared past a goal of $70,000. More than $97,000 is expected to be raised for the women's athletic department.

Just four years ago, this same event made $12,000 with 84 participants. However, with the $15,000 donation from Diet Pepsi, this year's fund raiser boasts impressive numbers.

In the walk alone, 1,146 walkers were expected to raise about $91,000. The Briefcase Relay, which involved Omaha corporations, raised about $6,500 with 19 teams.

"The Women's Walk was a positive event because any time you involve the governor of the state, the University and the national media it's good publicity for everyone at UNO," said University Relation's Nancy Davis.

UNO's second Celebrate UNO festival took a "quantum leap" forward this year, according to Vic Gutman, coordinator of the event.

"This year, wherever you walked there were things going on," he said. "And the departments were far more involved. They did more, they did it better and they did it with enthusiasm."

Gutman estimated attendance at the event between 12 and 14,000. Last year's festival brought 8,500 visitors to the UNO campus.

The festival also took place with no lost children and a working bell tower, according to Nancy Davis, manager of UNO community relations and communications services.

"I think the weather helped a lot," Davis said. "And also being the second time around, you get the people from last year, the people they told and new people from around the community to come."

"This time it was bigger and better. And that's how it should be every year."

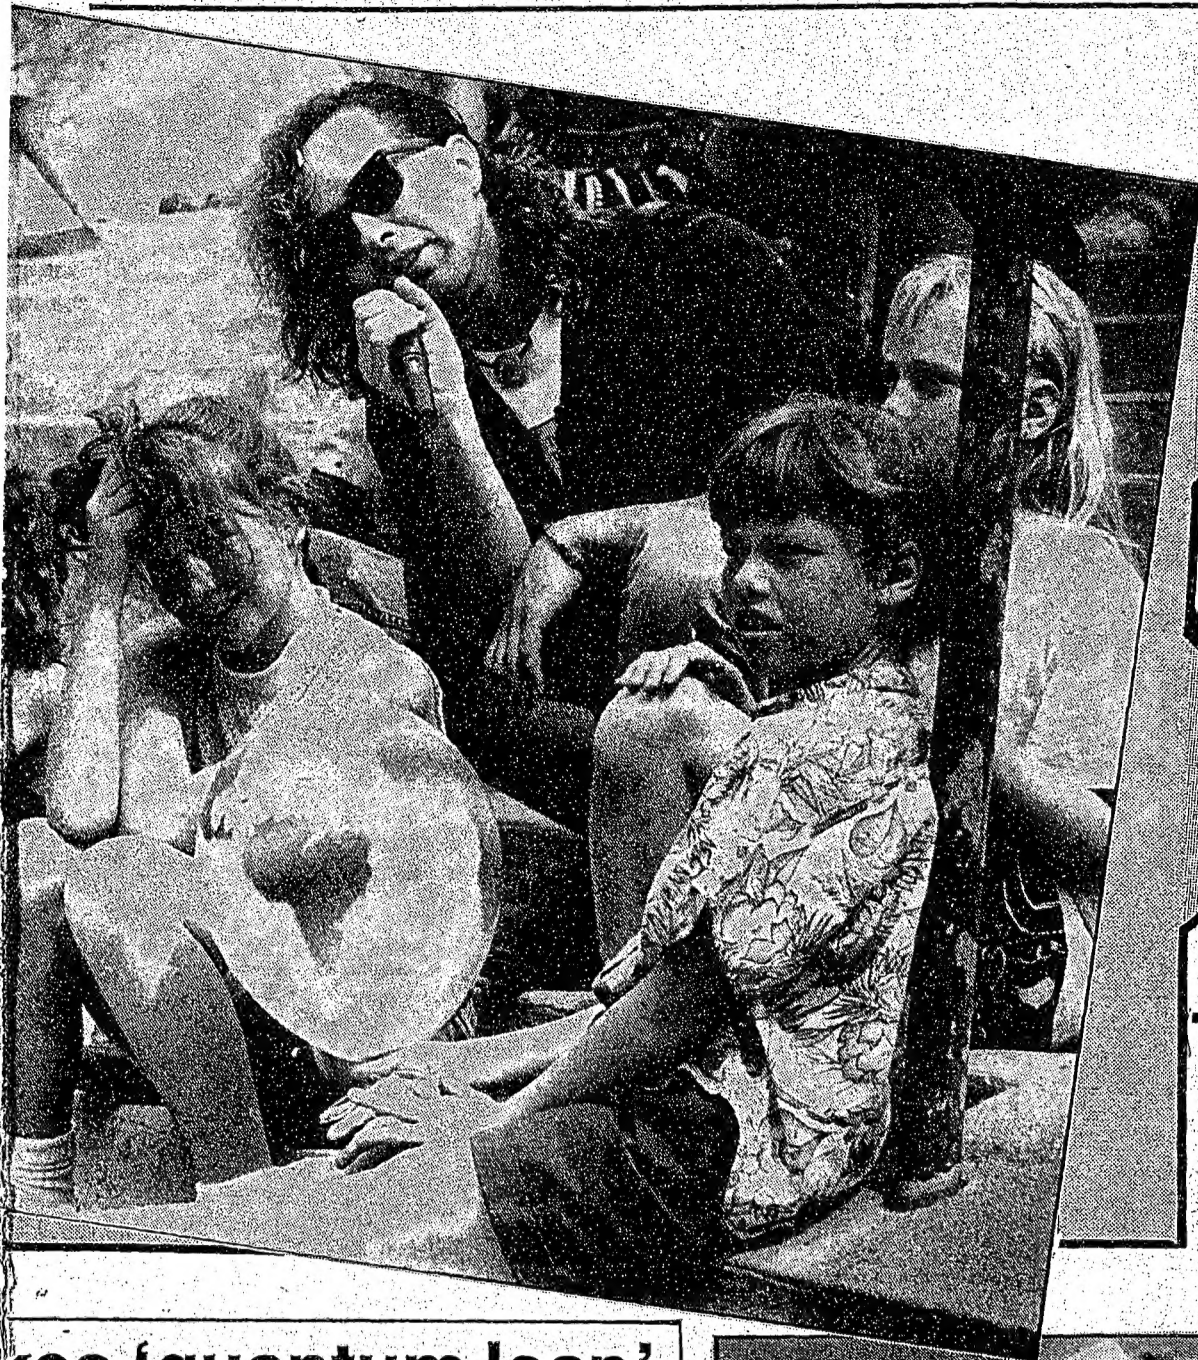

According to Davis, the event ran much smoother this year.

"I think everyone knows what and what not to expect now. Nothing went wrong. We had one injured knee, and that was it. It was amazing."

Director of University Relations Lou Cartier said the akes 'quantum leap'

university administration does not know whether a third Celebrate UNO will be held next year.

"We will evaluate the event to make sure that the focus remains on this campus, and hopefully we will make a decision in May," he said.

Gutman said the internal morale of the campus is just as important as letting the Omaha community see UNO and feel like they are part of it.

"UNO is coming into its own," Gutman said. "I think the days of West Dodge High are over.

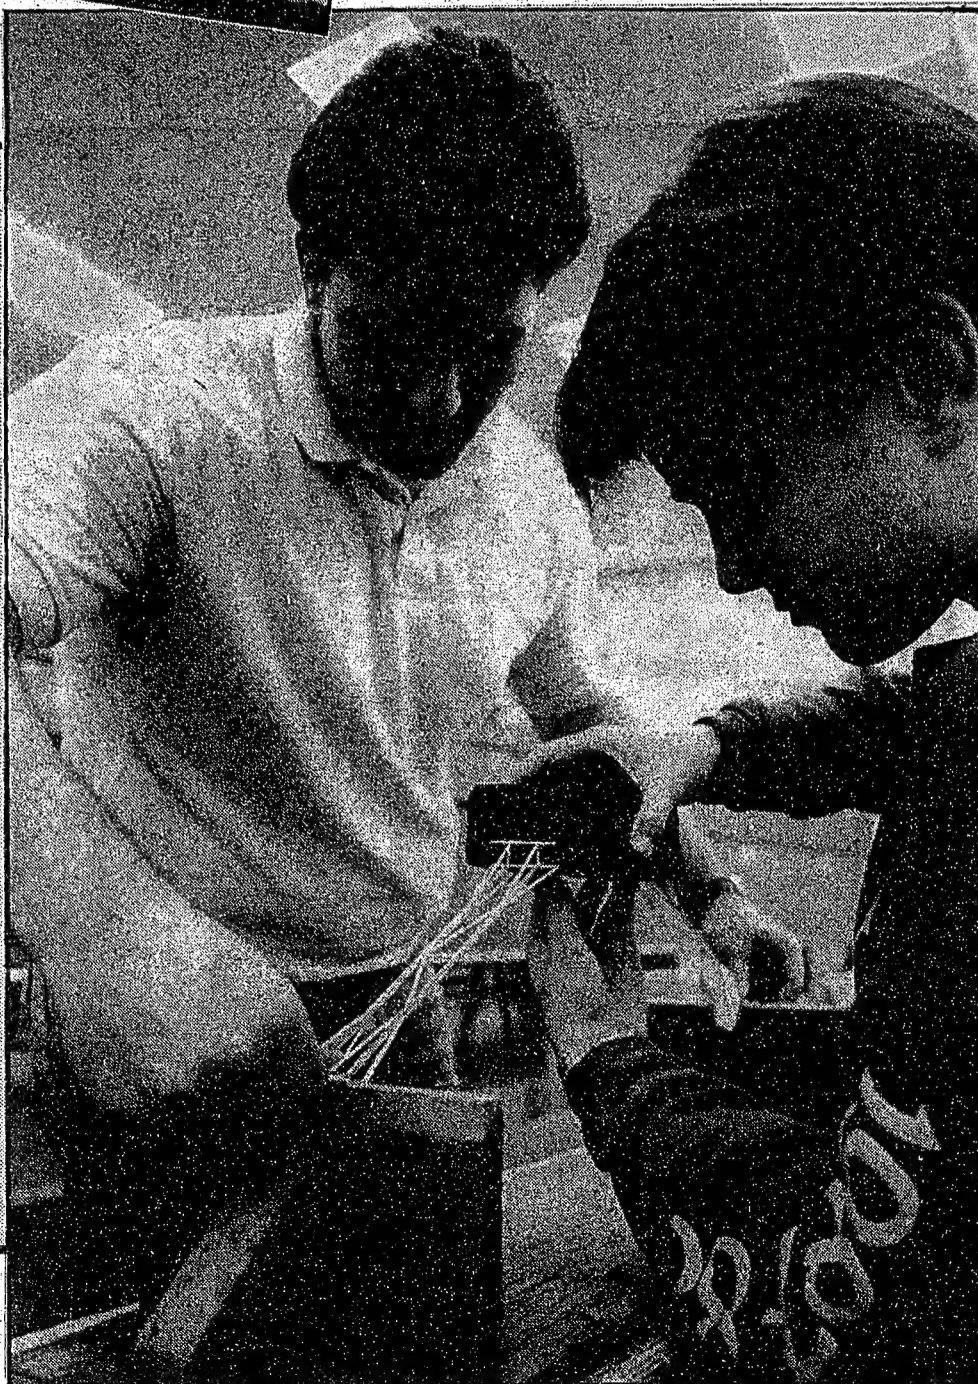

"It looks like a university and it feels like a university. And events like Celebrate UNO are allowing the community to see the improvements UNO has been making and continues to make."

The three sponsors, AT&T, Idelman Telemarketing and KETV, were a vital part of Celebrate UNO, according to Gutman.

"Without our sponsors, there would be no Celebrate UNO," he said.

Davis said she hopes the sponsors feel positive about being associated with something like Celebrate UNO because it is "so well attended" and "so community and family-oriented."

"I'm excited for the university," Gutman said. "UNO is a major resource that has been taken for granted. A weekend like this is a great showcase. I am thrilled with the involvement on every level, faculty, staff and students. They should all be very proud of themselves."

'Carpe Diem'

Students, faculty create play from scratch

By ERIC STOAKES
Feature Editor

Carpe Diem," the UNO Theatre's last play of the season, begins as a group of artists gather for a New Year's Eve party Dec. 31, 1999. Ushering in the millennia, the group celebrates the coming of the new century and the passing of the old.

Chairman of Dramatics Arts Doug Paterson, who is directing the new production, said the play was created by UNO students and faculty from scratch. "It was a completely collaborative effort," Paterson said.

"We began with a group of people whose purpose was to create a play that grows out of that company," Paterson said. "Rather than using an existing play, we drew together the interests and needs of these people and put them in a blender and pushed puree."

According to Paterson, the UNO Theatre's current production is the first collaborative effort in more than seven years.

"I don't think you'll find one college program in 100 that will take that kind of risk and start from scratch," he said.

The company began working on "Carpe Diem," latin for "seize the day," Feb. 1.

"The core of the work was the development process," Paterson said. "To trust in the fact that 12 heads are somehow as good as one."

When determining what the play would be about, the company discussed life and death, and the coming of the turn of the century.

"We thought: 'How about a play that shows the people that have to deal with the millennium and using that as a device to focus on life and death?'" Paterson said.

When the play begins at the party, a group consisting of a dancer, an actor, a writer, a painter and a sculptor, along with other artists, gather to celebrate the new year and their new-found successes.

"In the preceding six months, they have started to get nationally known, but they have begun to lose touch with what made them outrageously good," Paterson said.

In the course of the party, the group "fractures," Paterson said.

The second act shows the depth of this schism and asks whether the group's problems can be repaired.

"The script is about overcoming bad experiences with death in order to get a healthier view of death," said Jerome Onik, who portrays light designer Jacob Francis.

Since the company created the play, Onik said the characters are more tied to the actors portraying them than in some other productions.

"We helped create them, so we have a better understanding of them," Onik said.

The group collaboration did pose some problems.

"We had some very strong differences of opinion, but I'm proud of the company's work," Paterson said. "The process has been a kind of a formative fusion."

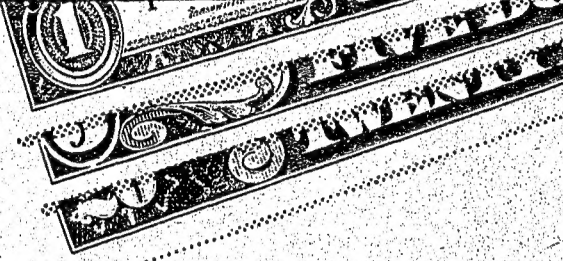

"Carpe Diem," Latin for "seize the day," opens Friday at 8 p.m. in the University Theatre. The cast- and company-created production will run April 21-23 and April 28-30.

Onik said working on the play has provided a good learning experience.

"It has given us a chance to learn exactly what goes into the production from beginning to end," Onik said. "I think it's going to be a good show."

Deborah Rawlings and Michael Etzrodt star in UNO's last play of the season, "Carpe Diem."

As Mavs enter 'most crucial' week, Buda is confident

By TONY FLOTT
Staff Reporter

After holding its second scrimmage of the spring Saturday afternoon, the UNO football team will enter what Coach Sandy Buda calls the most crucial week of the April practices.

"Teams never stay the same," Buda said. "They either get better or worse. That's why it's important we have a good week."

The team has implemented 75 percent of its offense and defense and will be adding another 15 percent over the next week. Buda said he hopes that will prevent his team from showing any signs of relaxation.

The Mavs improved enough in their second scrimmage to leave Buda optimistic about the team's strengths.

The passing game received most of the attention Saturday, allowing Buda to look at the plays put in last week.

Quarterback Paul Cech completed 6 of 11 passes with two interceptions for 111 yards, and Kelly Gill was 5 for 11 with one interception for 97 yards. Both players remained one and two respectively on the depth chart.

Cech and Gill contributed to an offense which had several big plays to its credit, despite facing a blitzing defense.

Senior receiver Bob Gordon hauled in a 55-yard touchdown pass from Gill. Junior tailback LaRon Henderson scored on a 35-yard run after setting it up with a 20-yard scamper.

Both Henderson and sophomore Abel Fernandez received more repetitions since the team only had five healthy running backs.

"The backs ran well to the holes and were very aggressive," Buda said.

Henderson carried the ball 12 times for 76 yards and Fernandez ran 21 times for 84 yards.

Buda did not single out any players on defense but said the unit as a whole played well on passing downs when they blitzed.

Also earning Buda's praise was the play of junior college transfers Darin Curtis, Mark Priest and Jay Stuke.

Softball team slugs record to 14-14

By TIM COSTELLO
Staff Reporter

The UNO Lady Mavs' softball team returned home Sunday from the University of Northern Iowa Softball Tournament with a 2-4 tourney record, after playing well against stiff competition, Coach Mary Yori said.

"We're hitting the ball hard and that helped us out in beating some good teams," she said.

UNO's tourney weekend began with a loss to Augustana 5-2 on Friday.

Saturday, UNO picked up victories over Bradley 7-0 and St. Xavier 7-4, and losses against Missouri Western 8-3 and St. Cloud State 1-0.

UNO was eliminated from action Sunday by Oklahoma City University, 6-4.

In the win over St. Xavier, sophomore center fielder Sherri Novak and senior left fielder Sharon Krebs each had three singles, and junior first baseman Jackie Hansen drove in two runs, one on a double and one on a single.

Junior pitcher Debbie Crouse also contributed two RBIs and picked up the win for UNO.

Against Bradley, Hansen started things off in the first inning with a double, driving in Novak from second base and putting UNO ahead 1-0.

"Those three have had two decent scrimmages and will make definite contributions next fall," Buda said.

Buda said the strengths of his team, thus far, are healthy running backs, the defensive line and the first unit linebackers.

The team felt a bit of the injury bug this past week with sophomore running back Bruce Martens facing possible arthroscopic surgery. Sophomore receiver Chris Cannas will also be out for the spring with an injury.

Senior receiver Jeff Smith, who Buda said he was counting on for big plays, has quit the team to concentrate on studies.

In the fifth inning UNO exploded for six runs on consecutive doubles by freshman pitcher Lynda Bartsch. Junior catcher Karrie Hughes followed with four singles to ice the win.

Bradley, a Division I school with a 4-0 tourney record going into the game, was held to three hits by Bartsch (4-1).

"I was pleased with Lynda Bartsch's pitching victory over Bradley," Yori said. "She went the distance against a tough Division I team."

UNO lost a heartbreaker to St. Cloud State Saturday 1-0, as St. Cloud's Dede Theisen drove in the winning run with a double in the top of the seventh inning. UNO junior Beth Wedge held St. Cloud to two hits in the losing effort, making her record 5-7.

UNO was eliminated from the tourney on Sunday by Oklahoma City, which came from behind with a four-run burst in the sixth inning to win the game.

Yori said she was pleased overall with her team's play in the tournament.

"We hit the ball hard, which was a definite plus for us. We need to work on holding our opponents to less runs."

UNO, now 14-14 for the year, will play South Dakota State at home, April 18 at 5 p.m.
